

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Monday 18 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:

Many areas very wet Tuesday to Thursday.

This Evening and Tonight:

Spells of rain, heavy at times, will affect much of the UK. Parts of northern Wales and northern England will see the heaviest and most persistent rain. Colder and frosty over northern and central Scotland where a few showers about.

Tuesday:

Bright across northern Scotland but otherwise mostly cloudy with spells of rain affecting many parts, especially Northern Ireland, southern Scotland, northern England and Wales where some heavy rain.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:

Remaining extremely unsettled with heavy rainfall, potential for snowfall on the northern edge. Strong winds across southern and, more especially, central areas. Much colder in the north with wintry showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.